Government Control of Argentine Grain Exchanges
Apparently the Argentine government made up its mind that the grain exchanges in that republic are no longer going to be a power unto themselves. The government has placed trading in grain futures on the Buenos Aires and Rosario markets under its own control and in future a government official will supervise trading operations as well as the telegraphic market on the market. Official reports in all transactions will be published daily giving the quantities traded, the delivery dates, prices and full classification. Every operator in future will be required to keep books covering all transactions and these books are to be open for inspection by government officials.

Trading on the Argentine grain exchanges, previously restricted to members only, has been extended by the minister of agriculture, to farm co-operative officials, millers, exporters, and bond holders. It is provided by the legislation that the Buenos Aires and Rosario grain exchanges must subscribe $500 per month each to cover the expenses of government supervision. In addition both markets must release within 6 days of the market of their reserve funds for warrant loans against stored grain, although exemption will be granted to members of the government.

Suggested Wheat Varieties
Many farmers who have been growing Garret wheat extensively are planning on growing the same seed of some other variety. He was said University of California recommended for districts where wheat is growing Garret and where Marquis does not make good showing. Registered and certified seed can be obtained at present and is preferable to ordinary seed. Do not permit Garret to be mixed with any other variety in your seed plot.

Entomological Warnings of Cut Worm Menace
Arthur Gibson, entomologist, calls attention to the probability of severe cut worm in the western countries in 1932 in areas where the cut worm has not been infested last year. He states that any fields which were undisturbed so that the soil surface was covered or trusted from August last to September 15 in 1932, are reasonably free from cut worms this year. Remedial action which was cut after September 15, 1932, should be considered as safe if they were undisturbed during August 1932. Mr. Gibson suggested that where there is doubt as to whether fields are free of cut worms, a test should be made by seeding an individual strip of wheat diagonally across the field. This indication strip should be seeded as early as it is possible to drill on the land and long before regular seeding starts. This strip will give a fair estimate of the condition of the field as weather conditions which may be expected to a height of about five inches will not hatch many of the field grubs. Wheat and Increased World Population
A very important factor to the world view situation which is frequently overlooked by the general public is the yearly increase in the world's population. While undoubtedly there is a surplus of grain in the world, the increase in the ratio of increase of population as compared with the grain figures, the record for the ten-year period from 1920-30 shows that the yearly increase in population was 16,000,000. It is estimated to be fed than in the year 1920. Based on the estimate of the world population, a Winnipeg statistician, of 2-1/2 bushels of wheat annual per capita consumption, the world would require 40,000,000 bushels of wheat more than it did in 1920. The steady increase in the world population has been outpacing by the increase in wheat production. For the 23 years up until 1930 the world's wheat acreage on the average increased between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 acres per year. The trend has been the other way during the past two years, the decrease in acreage in the world wheat crop during the last year alone having been 12,000,000 acres. The reduction in acreage could it will not take very long for the demand for wheat to overtake the supply.

Wheat Prices
Wheat prices on the Winnipeg exchange dropped a half cent today after making slight gains during the past few days. May closed at 1.8, July at 1.6 and October at 1.4.

Export trade was light, but Liverpool and Chicago markets were firm.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

ALBERTA INCOME TAX RATES UNCHANGED

EDMONTON, March 30.—Voting down by a 10-9 vote the exemption for single and married persons, government supporters approved these sections of the province's income tax as first drafted in committee of the whole treasury evening.

As now passed by the committee, the act will allow $1,000 exemption to married persons or those with dependents and $700 to other persons. These were the amounts in the bill when first introduced. The tax will also, the $2 billing fee or base tax will not be changed.

HOUSE FAVORS EXTENSION FEDERAL GRANT SUGGESTS ACRAGE BASIS

EDMONTON, March 30.—Extension of the federal wheat bonus of five cents a bushel for this year was urged in a resolution adopted by the provincial legislature Tuesday afternoon.

The resolution also suggests that Alberta farmers who have their crop in 1931 through drought or hail, should be paid a bonus of five cents a bushel by $1 an acre. Further, the resolution expresses appreciation to the provincial legislature Tuesday afternoon.

SHANGHAI, March 30.—A skirmish between Japanese and Chinese forces at Chuanwangtiao took place today, according to Japanese military authorities, and resulting in a truce in the peace parleys which are slated to be resumed again tomorrow.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF ACT TO BE EXTENDED

OTTAWA, March 30.—Climaxing a hectic day of debate, the house of commons early Wednesday morning passed the long overdue act to extend the unemployment relief act to the end of May 1933.

HAI L INSURANCE IN ALBERTA DECLARED UNLAWFUL

EDMONTON, March 30.—Hull insurance in Alberta needs putting on more satisfactory basis, being too risky and unprofitable, the legislative agricultural committee today decided by a 10-9 vote. The committee, headed by Mr. C. P. R. Hines, representing the Canadian Life Underwriters Association.

The committee, said Mr. Hines, desire to offer two alternative bills. A 10 per cent deductible policy, with a 25 per cent reduction in rate, and a 25 per cent deductible policy with 50 per cent reduction rate. The committee also proposed a plan for withholding certain per cent of crop income from insurance, but with offsetting loss from insurance.

POLICE COURT

Edgar Peterson, of Nauyas, was assessed a total of $60 in Bassano police court today, Thursday, when he appeared before Magistrate E. Bond charged with breaking into the C. P. R. telephone line near Crowfoot.

On Sunday C. P. R. line men discovered their telephone service was out of order, and at Crowfoot it was found that 67 glass insulators were smashed and the main wire broken.

W. A. Fellingham, C. P. R. investigator, and Sergeant J. N. Cawsey investigated the case and laid a charge.

He was fined $25 and costs and ordered to pay damages amounting to $20.

Disastrous Fire Sweeps Hussar Business Section

GEM NEWS

$100,000 Damage Done in the Base Early Tuesday Morning—Druggists, Hotel, Shellfish's store, Clifford's Store, Massine Lodge, and Alberta

Damage estimated at $100,000 was done by a fire which swept a portion of the main business section of Hussar, during the early hours of Tuesday morning, March 30.

The places of business, the Massine Lodge, and the apartments of the townsmen and men from St. Albert, were completely destroyed with all their contents.

The buildings burned were: Stiles drug store, Hussar hotel, the Jan's store operated by J. J. Stiles, Massine, Alberta Cafe, A. A. Clifford's general store, the Massine Lodge, and the living apartments of A. A. Clifford.

The fire threatened the Revelote lumber yard and E. LeGrand's store, and the flames spread to the building of the main business section including H. D. Brown's hardware store, Curtis & Milner's hardware store, Hawke's shoe store, the hotel of Chinese cafe, would have burned.

Only the heroic efforts of the firemen and men from St. Albert, and Bassano prevented the flames from spreading and further damage.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is believed to have started from a telephone wire near the R. J. Jan's building.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. A. A. Clifford, who resided with her family above their store. Mrs. Clifford saw the flames and called the firemen.

A large crowd of men soon gathered to bridge the fire, but the flames spread so rapidly toward the buildings that it was impossible to get the fire out.

The fire was a roaring mass of flames, and above the flames a thick black smoke billowed up into the air.

The fire was the worst of the kind that has ever occurred in the town of Hussar.

POUNCE TAB 2 MEN BREAKING IN CON'S STORE

Two Men Discovered Trying to Break in Louis Conn's Store—Caught

Two men who gave their names as Joseph Dubois and Andrew Joshi, were discovered trying to force an entrance into Louis Conn's store in the early hours of Saturday morning last and arrested a few hours later by Sergeant T. Ingeberg.

Peculiarities in the very light snowfall gave the police officers the clue to the men to the east end of town where the suspects were discovered in an old railway car which they had admitted their guilt later in the day and were taken to Calgary to answer a charge of forcing an entry.

The attempted break-in was discovered by Constable Ingeberg. Apparently one of the men was on the watch while the other smashed a window in the rear of the store after first placing a sack over the glass.

Perhaps after all, the Chinese are only paying for the many crimes they have perpetrated on our country.

With the alibi license fee on cars this year again, and the gasoline tax still in effect, it is pleasing to note there is no tax on hay or on the old-fashioned buggy.

Yongsgrove, Plumber

The Lindbergh kidnapping incident is the latest proof that crime in the United States of America is on a sound business basis.

The Hanna Herald is again being published after a shut-down of several weeks following a disastrous fire. We congratulate The Herald on its come-back. It takes more than a fire to put a five-week newspaper down for the count.

GOOD PROSPECTS
 Crop prospects in the Bassano district are better this spring than they have been in any spring during the past three years.

The ground is not worked, but there is a good supply of moisture in the soil, sufficient to give the new crop a good start.

The good prospects are cheering to farmers and business men alike. Everything is settling about spring work with renewed energy and optimism. Their efforts will be well rewarded if used by an average supply of rainfall.

WATER SUPPLY IS BETTER

A decided improvement in Bassano's water supply is noticed this time of a sewage disposal plant by the city of Calgary.

While Calgary's disposal plant is not yet completed the work has advanced to a stage where partial treatment of the sewage is effected before dumping in the Bow river.

In previous years Calgary dumped raw sewage into the river, polluting the water supply of towns which, used Bow river water downstream from Calgary. The pollution was most noticeable during the winter months when the river was covered with ice and the water had no chance to be freed of the nauseating gases with which it was impregnated. This polluted water was pumped through the water mains of Bassano and had a vile smell and taste when taken from the water taps in our homes.

This objectionable feature is absent this winter because pollution at Calgary has been stopped.

Bassano's fight for pure water was successful only after fifteen years of constantly pressing her demands that Calgary live up to the provincial health regulations which can now take a drink of water without wondering how many little germs are swimming about in it, ready to do us harm.

FEW CAN TAKE LIVESTOCK LOAN

While the scheme to build up the livestock industry of western Canada by financing the purchase of purebred stock may be a very worthy endeavor, it is doubtful if more than a very few farmers in this district will be in a position to take advantage of it.

The company is only following business methods in asking small security for loans, but farmers are not in a position to give security. The low prices for farm produce and the high overhead expense on irrigated land—and on which thousands of dollars are still owing—have left the irrigation farmer with little funds, owing large sums, and with no security.

Eskimos have no religion as we understand the term but they do believe in spirits. One of their child-like customs is to rip an old garment to pieces so that the devil may be prevented from wearing it.

SOMEONE'S COMMON-LIE

(By James Whitcomb Riley)

Somebody's at a common-like and good
 And plain, and easy understood.
 Somebody's at folks like me and you
 Kin understand, and relish, too.
 And find some germ in 'at hits
 The spot, and sticks and benefits.
 We don't need nothin' extra fine,
 Cause take the run of minds like mine.
 And we'll go more on good horse-sense
 Than all our flowery eloquence;
 And we'll judge best of honest acts
 By Nature's statement of the facts.
 Your misery or happiness
 Be signifyin' that's worth the time.
 O tellin' in plain talk or rhyme—
 Jes' sort o' let your subject run
 As of the Lord most blessed.

OF JOYS MOST SWEET

(By Alice Micholals)

How futile life would be
 Had it not brought to me
 Your hand, your sunny smiles.
 Had it not given me this
 One taste of perfect bliss
 A little while.

Joy's self is ever fleet
 And this, of joys most sweet,
 Can not remain.
 Like rose that blooms to die,
 Like dawning in the sky,
 We see it wane.

Yet this rare gift alone
 Will for all griefs atone
 That could ever bring
 Not on life's futile run
 Since it has brought to me
 This perfect thing.

Had a Better Start

Then there's one about the actor who toured the country in "Hamlet."
 "What kind of a run did you have in New Brunswick?"
 "Well," was the reply, "we beat the audience over the provincial line
 by three minutes."

Inside Information

"Heddy, you better go and tell your master," said the motorist to the farmer's boy who stood looking at the load of hay upon the lane.
 "He knows," the boy replied.
 "Cause he's got to know."
 "You look under the hay."

Know His Soldiers

During the recent Legion convention, an elderly lady, being alarmed at the antics of the legionnaires, approached a policeman, asking, "Can't you stop them, officer?"
 "Lack," the officer replied, "there's an old man in Europe who tried to do that, and now he's saving wood in Holland."

Force of Habit

The young wife was heartbroken.
 "What's the matter?" asked a friend.
 "Oh, my husband is so absent-minded. After breakfast he left a tip on the table, and when I handed him he had he handed me another tip.
 "Well, that's nothing to worry about. It's just force of habit."
 "That's what worries me."
 He kissed me when I gave him his coat."

Electric Cooking and Its Advantages

Economical - Clean - Fast - Convenient - Healthy

An Electric Range is Economical Because

Food, of course, costs more than fuel. It is a well known fact that shrinkage on foods in preparation runs from ten to twenty percent. This percentage, however, is greatly reduced when the food is cooked on an ELECTRIC RANGE, which means that your food budget is lessened for the simple reason that you buy less food. Furthermore, an ELECTRIC RANGE, properly operated, works for you at the surprisingly low cost of about one cent per meal per person.

An Electric Range is Clean Because

There is no soot or smoke to smudge your kitchen, pots and pans and other cooking utensils. No tedious scouring. Your draperies retain their original beauty longer when you cook with ELECTRICITY, clean as sunlight. The ELECTRIC RANGE is easy to clean and equally as easy to keep clean.

An Electric Range is Fast Because

High speed surface elements give quick cooking heat, and the well insulated oven soon reaches cooking temperature. Practically all the heat is conserved for cooking, very little being wasted. The ELECTRIC RANGE itself does not radiate heat.

An Electric Range is Convenient Because

The antiquated pastime of "pot-watching" is totally eliminated forever. This time-some task is efficiently and accurately handled by the Automatic Timer and Oven Heat Control without your supervision. You slip the food in the oven, set the controls, and forget it, knowing that the meat will be perfectly cooked on time, at dinner time. Modern recipes call for the application of specified temperatures for certain time intervals. The ELECTRIC RANGE does this for you to the degree and minute, which means that you experience a new freedom in cooking with positive assurance of better results. The ELECTRIC RANGE can be conveniently placed in your kitchen to have unnecessary steps and will keep your kitchen cool because of its insulated oven, centering the heat inside, where it belongs.

An Electric Range is Healthy Because

The full flavor of foods cooked ELECTRICALLY is retained in the food, which also applies to the vitamins, mineral salts and juices, so essential to a properly balanced meal, as the cooking is done with very little water, thereby conserving these health-giving elements, which are lost when ordinary methods are used.

Our prices on Electric Ranges, including installation in your home, are the lowest ever offered in Alberta. We invite to consult our Local Manager for these prices and full details of our Convenient Time Payment Plan.

A Great Depression!

4 ALL within twenty years. Could there be a more grueling test?

4 Yet life insurance stands invincible. During that whole period it paid every obligation promptly and fully — as it has ever since the Dominion was formed.

4 The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada itself paid to policyholders and beneficiaries in cash during these periods —

The War (1914-1918)

The Flu (1919)

The Depression (1930-1931)

— over $226,000,000. It has paid to its policyholders and beneficiaries since formation nearly $600,000,000.

KATHARINE NEWMAN BURTON

ELBENTH INSTALMENT

"This is the costume of a silly woman, Felix," she said, enough to envelop a dangerous make-believe. It isn't new! It's again. But I did want to force you to see me like this. Because I felt that if you once could see me as I really am, and Felix, I much more wanted to—to pose as—"

"You say things!"

"Because I knew that if I looked and spoke the real things of my nature you would never want me for your wife."

"I want you for my wife," he said doggedly and with a sudden dark flash. "I'll not let you go down into the streets—or into the mud. I'll save you in spite of your madness and your wickedness. And now, to begin saving you, tell me what you know and let's get on with the search for my papers. I take it that you understand what one this man could make of them to ruin me."

"I love that man. I want him to clear himself even if it must be at the price of your ruin, Felix."

"Felix, very still and calm and white, came up to her."

"You choose me for your enemy then? People who have had the courage or the folly to do this have always regretted it. Always. I am warning you. I have seen men kill and—"

"Yes, I have been killed to, as your prototype, I don't know, Felix. Lynda in his arms, stood carefully with his back to them; so, to one, not even Mary, who had withdrawn at once in some offense, say the man who was supposed to be Catrino as he came into the room."

He came slowly, painfully, progressing from door to sofa and along it, using its back for his support until he came up to Marcella and touched her elbow. As she looked up he laid a leather bag on her knee.

"I have brought a wedding present for my daughter," announced Nick Sandall, pugnacious.

"It was Marcella's terrible low cry that provoked Joseph's release. The cry had so little of the human in it that Felix leaped and wheeled, forgetting everything but some of his instinctive fear of beasts."

Marcella had bent down close over the open box and was looking at her jewels.

"They're all here," she touched them with her fingers, "but they're not yours. They belonged to my mother. That's Julia's blood."

Joseph, who had been before that terrible figure, "Mother, don't! There's no blood. Mother, please look up."

"Touch—touch, yourself, dear. Put your hand on them. You feel that? It's Julia's blood. My hand has killed him. The police will be coming. Give them to me. They were a gift. We are going away. They are my ruin. I'll not then hold an altar. They will be an offering." She got up, holding the box against her breast, and went over to her shrine.

All three of the sacred vultures left her go. They watched her fold herself in behind the leather doors. It was Felix Kent who took control.

"She's out of her wit," he said, "and must have a doctor."

He turned to Nick whose hollow eyes had lost their malice and were distracted with terror and remorse.

"I don't know who you are, but since you brought about this condition by a rather ill-advised return of missing property, you'd better be the one to go for a doctor. Bring him back here as quickly as you can. This young lady has an important engagement and must go out with me at once."

"No, Felix."

"I'm afraid that it's necessary. And in good time, probably. Catrino said that if I should be driven to needing it."

He directed her gaze toward the square hall. It seemed to her scared eyes to be filled with men. At sight of them Nick went back a little toward the shining window.

But Felix boldly advanced and flung open the glass doors.

"I am Felix Kent, gentlemen. I am in charge here. Mr. Catrino has been gone. For an error? Come right in, please. I may need help."

One of them did come in obediently, displaying a paper and a badge.

"You are Felix Kent? You're the man we're looking for then. A summons from Chicago. They want to see you out, there about some evidence. An old case. Will you come with us now, and quietly please."

In that square entrance hall after they had closed the tall glass doors, Joseph saw him, standing among them, turn back as though against his will to look at her. She remembered another outline — noble, patient, proud.

This outline of her bridegroom had no such quality. His narrow knees were shrunken with pain, hatred, with frustrated passion, with lost vengeance. To escape that last terrible look the girl fell down before Nick Sandall and did her face.

He put his arm about her eagerly. And Felix, with the men, went out.

A strange day. A strange and evening. Marcella came into the sanctuary distracted by her memories. She came out quite serene. A child whose memory is only of today and yesterday. She thought that Nick Sandall was her indolent uncle and Joseph's friend to love.

They sent for a psychiatrist who promptly ordered her taken to a sanatorium.

She hardly knew that Dr. Bond had left until Nick spoke to her: "Come over here, Lynda. Are you too tired?"

Joseph, "This—the woman—she's been trading on the likeness then, I thought, at the least. They sent me word, I must take her back at once. Telephone for the police, Mrs. Harlow, or if he uses them—'I'll jail you both for a theft of jewels.' Think, my girl, stand still. Think hard. This is the last chance you may have for clear, calm thought."

She stood there in fact quite still, thinking, and behind her, in the room all filled with her own bridal flowers and gifts, her mother, wild-eyed and shaking, sat down as she was hidden to ring for the police.

They, who had answered another summons at the front door, came in.

"Mrs. Harlow, there's a man—"

"He's calling. Bring him in," and as Mary began to speak again Marcella bent down again to the phone and set her long index finger into the dial. Her shoulder was turned toward the French doors which Felix, Lynda in his arms, stood carefully with his back to them; so, to one, not even Mary, who had withdrawn at once in some offense, say the man who was supposed to be Catrino as he came into the room."

He came slowly, painfully, progressing from door to sofa and along it, using its back for his support until he came up to Marcella and touched her elbow. As she looked up he laid a leather bag on her knee.

"I have brought a wedding present for my daughter," announced Nick Sandall, pugnacious.

"It was Marcella's terrible low cry that provoked Joseph's release. The cry had so little of the human in it that Felix leaped and wheeled, forgetting everything but some of his instinctive fear of beasts."

Marcella had bent down close over the open box and was looking at her jewels.

"They're all here," she touched them with her fingers, "but they're not yours. They belonged to my mother. That's Julia's blood."

Joseph, who had been before that terrible figure, "Mother, don't! There's no blood. Mother, please look up."

"Touch—touch, yourself, dear. Put your hand on them. You feel that? It's Julia's blood. My hand has killed him. The police will be coming. Give them to me. They were a gift. We are going away. They sent for a psychiatrist who promptly ordered her taken to a sanatorium.

She hardly knew that Dr. Bond had left until Nick spoke to her: "Come over here, Lynda. Are you too tired?"

He was seated on the small broad sofa, curled up there, pale, as she had seen him on the bench in his study room.

"I'm not tired. I'm afraid."

"Alas!" He wiped his swollen fingers, passed in their lack of stillness his pipe. "Of me, dear?"

"Of what you are going to tell me, Nick."

"You'd rather I'd be quiet? Let it all go? You'd rather never know the truth?"

"I'd rather not," but of course I must listen. It's too late now. I'll listen, Nick. Only, do you love me?"

"To my regret, it's because I was fool enough to let you trick me with those confounded eyes and ways of yours—those darling eyes and ways—yes, trick me into loving you that I've done what I have done and been the blasted fool I have been lately."

"Lately?"

"You think it's not such a recent development? Well, it has been long. I've been living—lately—with a sort of maniac. I've been jealous. I've wanted you to myself. It was I who was trying to steal when I came in here on that wet night and took the jewels. There now. Go back to your seat. I've got a penance to go through with now."

Lynda.

"I met your mother in a California case, San Francisco. She was making the American grand tour. She got separated from her escort, lost her chaperon. A man insulted her. I knocked him down. I got me take her back to her hotel. That's the way it began. In those days I was a mining engineer. I gambled a little on the side when I felt the lack in my fingers. I went to New York and got myself into—"

Lynda.

"I carried her off to California. I had a good job there. In the mountains. But that was a rough naked sort of camp life. So I went to live in the city. I'd go off to the mines alone and come back to her. Those week-ends were gorgeous enough to feed a man's starved memory for gray years, to point even a prison wall."

Are You Among Those Who Say---"I never read Advertisements"

TO SAY "I never read the advertisements" would be much like saying, "I never use soap," or "I never read newspapers," or "No one can teach me anything," or "I know everything."

Many good—but not very wise—persons seem to think that all advertisements are just the vainglorious bragging of those who publish them—designed to part fools and their money. The truth is that most advertisements are incitements to their readers to do or be or buy or use something for their immediate or prospective advantage. Advertisers, to be successful and to live long, have to offer something of value or of desire—something really wanted or needed by the public. Advertisers, to live long, must not cheat the expectations or confidence of those who buy what they offer or propose.

Here are some questions to be answered by those who say "I never read the advertisements"—

1. What alarm clock would you buy if you needed one?
2. What camera would you, for your own use or to give to a son or daughter?
3. What motor car possesses your favor?
4. What face cream or shaving soap or cream, or tooth paste did you use today?
5. What laundry soap (or flakes) is in your kitchen right now?
6. Does the breakfast brand which you like best have a brand name?
7. The watch on your wrist—what name does it bear?
8. Your shoes—who made them?
9. Your life insurance policy—what company issued it?
10. The ginger ale which you serve to guests—what brand is it?
11. The tea which you buy regularly—what brand is it?
12. The soap and baked beans and the tomato catsup now on your pantry shelves—what brands are they?

You see, whether or not you consciously or habitually read advertisements, you buy, by preference, what advertisements have recommended to your confidence and what experience has proven to be satisfactory.

The things which we don't buy, and which try a sickish life, are those which are not advertised, and which have to ride into public favor on the backs of well advertised products.

It is to one's discredit to say, "I never read advertisements."

THE PICTURES

Two tremendous firestorm congratulations, with every apparatus in the city at the same scene, with thrilling rescue work, half-breath escapes and falling walls—shrieking sirens, clanging bells, pumping engines, roaring flames lighting the sky and howling super-men engaged in the death-defying task of fighting the most devastating of terrors—fire!

This is what you get for thrills in "The Third Alarm," the Tiffany special production, showing at the Orpheum Theatre Friday and Saturday this week, April 1 and 2. And for drama you get the story of the orphaned children of a fireman who lost his life saving others, and the efforts of two members of the fire department to save them from going to the Children's Home.

Emilie Johnson wrote the story of "The Third Alarm," and Frances Hyland and Jack Natofford prepared the continuity and dialogue. Emory Johnson directed the picture to bring tears from the plight of two orphans and to thrill and terrify with all the excitement that attends a fire that gets beyond control.

The cast can claim to be all-star without boasting. Anita Louise threw her soul into playing Milly, who is all the picture there is in the role. She is an enchanting young person with plenty of talent. Jack Hall is delightfully engaging as the fireman who goes hunting for a wife to mother Milly and her little brother, only to find that Milly is no longer a child and that they love each other. Little George Billings is clever and cute as baby brother.

Paul Hart provides most of the laughs with his inimitable role of "Beauty," and Jean Herschell, Herbert Bowditch, Mary Moran, Walter Perry, Nils Marston, and others, do excellent work.

"Hell's Angels," a mighty drama of the fighting airman in France, is coming Friday and Saturday next week, April 7 and 8. Don't miss this wonderful picture.
